Explore the feelings of frustration, sadness and loneliness that a young man can feel when an animal dies. Synopsis of the book in this series of the Mister Rogers Neighborhood helps children share feelings of animal death while offering reassurance that sanding is a natural, natural thing to do. A first sensitive and sensitive book on death. —The Bulletin of the Centre for Children’s Books Full of warmth and reassurance, ...When a Die Pet assures young people that no matter how badly they feel when they lose a pet, over time their pain relieves, and they will be able to remember with affection the happiness they shared. Fred Rogers and Jim Judkis live in Pittsburgh, PA. About the Author Producer, Magician, writer, puppet, minister, husband, father, Fred Rogers began on television of children thirty years ago. The direction he outlined was the creation of television programs that spoke, compared to the concerns of early childhood, not as adults see it but how children feel it. He received virtually every major prize in the television industry for work in his field, and dozens of others from special interest groups. Fred Rogers lives in Pennsylvania.
